

The remarkable story of the theme music.

“I feel I should know the music, but I can’t quite place it,” is a recurring comment by listeners to the Climate Matters podcasts and FreshFM radio episodes.

And that’s not surprising, because the music, “For Seasons,” is a brilliant yet heart-wrenching adaptation of Vivaldi’s famous violin concerti “Four Seasons” modified so as to reflect climate change.

An image derived from the algorithms that integrated climate data with the score for Vivaldi’s “Four Seasons.”

Using the original score, meteorological history, and artificial intelligence – and guided by composers and data experts - changes were orchestrated to the music to reflect changes in the climate since Vivaldi wrote the music some three hundred years ago.

With a “same only different” feel, starting in familiar territory but becoming increasingly deranged, the music is the brainchild of the Elbepharmonie Orchestra in Hamburg, Germany. Goto forseasonsbydata to learn the remarkable story of “For Seasons” and to hear it performed in the amazing Elbepharmonie.

The dramatic Elbepharmonie concert hall complex